Findings of Fact & Conclusions of Law

Respondent, Victor Lataj was issued the above summons for allegedly violating the New York City Administrative Code §19-190(b). Michael Nacmias, Esq. appeared remotely as Respondent's counsel. The Petitioner did not appear.

The details of the summons alleged the Respondent operated a motor vehicle, made a left turn and hit a pedestrian in the crosswalk causing injury, pedestrian had the right of way.

Respondent's counsel argued that the summons is insufficient for failing to find physical injury. Counsel argued that pursuant to the penal code physical injury is defined as "substantial injury" which the summons fails to allege.

I do not credit counsel's argument. I find the summons as written sufficiently alleges the Respondent caused physical injury and makes a prima facie case under the charged section of law. It would be the Respondent's burden to submit proof that the injury was not substantial and therefore not to be considered a physical injury.

I credit the findings of the issuing officer and find that the cited condition did exist.

Accordingly, the summons is sustained.
