Findings of Fact & Conclusions of Law

Respondent was charged with failure to yield causing injury. The respondent was represented by Michael Nacmias, Esq.

Mr. Nacmias argued that the summons was facially defective for two reasons: 1) The affidavit of service was in blank so there is no proof of service, which is a due process requirement; and, 2) The details of violation are conclusory in that they do not specify the nature of the injury, do not identify the respondent as the driver and do not indicate who had the right of way..

I find that the summons fails to state a prima facie case of violation.

The violation is dismissed.
